Stefano Callegari, the mastermind behind trapizzino, invented this innovative street food after venturing into the world of pizza in 2008 working as a delivery boy. From there, he went on to attend a culinary training course and opened a series of renowned pizzerias. His legacy is assured with this latest creation. The trapizzino is a soft and mouthwateringly flavorful focaccia pouch filled with deliciousness ranging from eggplant parmesan to meatballs with tomato sauce and chicken cacciatore, plus vegetarian options such as Roman artichoke and, my choice, misticanza – a mixture of leafy greens sautéed in garlic and red chili pepper. Have one for a snack or two for lunch, and throw in a supplì, a fried rice ball that comes in many different flavors.
